Thank you for your submission to The 2019 International Conference on Computational Science and Its Applications.

We are pleased to inform you that your paper, titled

"Asymptotic Distribution of the Bootstrap Parameter Estimator of an AR(p) Model" has been accepted as LNCS SHORT PAPER with some modifications (see reviews) for presentation at ICCSA 2019 and publication on the Springer LNCS ICCSA 2019 Proceedings (published by Springer).

However, the acceptance and inclusion of your paper in the proceedings is conditional on ALL the following requirements (please, read carefully):

In this paper, the author does the generalization about asymptotic distribution of the bootstrap parameter estimator for the AR(p) model, applying the delta method.

The paper is interesting and written clearly.

Three suggestions for corrections, are given below:

1 Introduction

Page 1, line 2, Equation (1), is missing "+":  $X_t = \dots + \epsilon_t$

Page 1, third paragraph, line 2, "see e.g. [6-9,11]", is missing reference 2.: [2,6-9,11]

4 Main Result

Page 8, line 7, "By applying Theorem 3 dan 4", the word dan is wrong: "3 and 4"

>>> Points in favour or against <<<

(+) The generalization about asymptotic distribution of the bootstrap parameter estimator for the AR(p) model is very important.

(-) None

>>> Comments for the authors <<<

The paper is well written, but the innovative contribution to the field of research on "Computational and Applied Statistics" is not clear. It is a purely theoretical work lacking a practical component, which could be added through a simulation study, for example.

The conclusion is summarized by theoretical evidence.

In my opinion, this work seems to be incomplete, in the sense that for the objectives of CAS session should be complemented with a simulation work. Alternatively, this reviewer suggest that the authors restructure the paper into the PHD Showcase format according to the instructions available in <http://www.iccsa.org/instructions-for-authors>.
