Association of knowledge, perception, and source of information about HIV/AIDS and attitudes towards Indonesian People to People Living with HIV/AIDS (PLHA)
Rini Mutahar*, Najmah, Yenni
*Faculty of Public Health, Soejiyo University, Palembang, Indonesia

Introduction: Negative attitudes toward people with HIV/AIDS (PLHA) can occur from various groups. Negative attitude from the community can affect the psychological condition of people living with HIV. In addition, the reduction of stigma and discrimination in society is an important indicator to measure the success of prevention programs of HIV/AIDS. This has become one of the reasons researchers to examine the factors associated with behavioral discrimination or stigma to PLHA population.

Objective: The purpose of this study was to identify factors associated with the Indonesian peoples' attitudes towards PLHA.

Methodology: This study use secondary data sourced from the Indonesia Demographic Health Survey 2007 which was a cross-sectional study. The study population was married men and women between the age of 15-54 years. The total respondents were 20,488 people. Data was analyzed using univariate, bivariate, and multivariate tests and logistic regression.

Survey 2007 which was a cross-sectional study. The study population was married men and women between the age of 15-54 years. The total respondents were 20,488 people. Data was analyzed using univariate, bivariate, and multivariate tests and logistic regression.

Result: Results showed that negative attitudes to PLHA was associated with sex (OR = 1.00; 95% CI = 1.03-1.16), area of residence (OR = 1.6; 95% CI = 1.51-1.69), education (OR = 0.63; 95% CI = 0.58-0.67), socioeconomic status (OR = 1.8; 95% CI = 1.69 to 1.93), knowledge (OR = 1.31; 95% CI = 1.24-1.39) and source of information (OR = 1.26; 95% CI = 1.20-1.45).

Conclusion: Findings of this research indicates that the government should cooperate with PLHA in providing information about the dangers of HIV/AIDS and its impact on social aspects such as stigma and discrimination against PLHA or counseling.

Dear all authors,

As advertised we are in the process of publishing the papers presented at the just-concluded Public Health Nursing Conference. The full text version of your papers will be published in the special edition of Malaysian Journal of Community Health, a peer-reviewed journal published by Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia (National University of Malaysia) subject to peer and editorial review of course. The journal is available in print version as well as open access on <http://www.communityhealthjournal.org/>

The editorial board has accepted me and Datu Dr Andrew Kiyu as guest editors. Among others our role is to assist the editorial board and to ensure that this special edition will materialise (I am optimistic that it will)

We are working on a very tight schedule. We hope to have all the articles reviewed by the end of May and the printing work process completed by end of June (Possible?). As such we hope to receive your manuscript by 4 April 2011. Attached is the "Instruction to Authors" extracted from the journal web site. Please email your manuscript to Ms Guence at

All your memories in one place without any limit
