Dear Inten Meutia,

the manuscript Sustainability Report: An overview of its recent development, submitted to Accounting and Financial Control Journal, needs to be revised.

Comments:

We consider three types of articles, namely: research paper, which is a final report on the finished original experimental study (the structure is Abstract, Introduction, Literature review, Method, Results, Discussion, Conclusion); theoretical paper, which is devoted to theoretical study of the problem, which complies with the journal's scope (the structure is Abstract, Introduction, Theoretical Basis, Results, Discussion, Conclusion); review paper, which is a study of concrete scientific problem, which complies with the journal's scope and is conducted based on the materials of the scientific publications (the structure is Abstract, Introduction, Literature review, Generalization of the main statements, Discussion, Conclusion) . You need to decide on the type of article and this will determine its structure and presentation style. The material should be correctly divided into sections. No other sections should be entered. Partitions should not be divided into small sections. The volume of the article (maximum) should be up to 6000 words (excluding the abstract, list of sources, appendices). The abstract (its volume is 150-250 words) should have the following sequence of presentation of the material - relevance, purpose, method, result, conclusion. A significant part of the volume of the abstract should be devoted to the result. Quantitative indicators should be provided. It is not necessary to divide the abstract by subheadings with the words "Purpose", "Methodology" ... Keywords should reflect the main idea and content of the article. It is desirable that they do not repeat the words from the title of the article and really were mostly words, not phrases. The introduction should be devoted to the relevance of the research topic and the formulation of the problem in general.

Conclusions should be devoted to the demonstration of the idea of the article, to indicate the result and its novelty and, most importantly, what conclusions should be drawn from the result.

The deadline for revisions is 2021-03-18
