Abstract

The use of herbicides in weed control must be done wisely so that negative impacts on land and cultivated plants can be minimized. Herbicide reductants were introduced to Pagaralam coffee farmers through an educational process. This study aims to analyze the characteristics of Pagaralam coffee farmers who are users of herbicide reductants. Comparison of the characteristics of users and non-users of reductants was carried out using the mean test, variance test, and chi squares test. The selection of respondents was using purposive sampling. The variables studied include the identity of the respondent, the identity of the land, and the culture of coffee farming. There were 125 respondents consisting of 55 users and 70 non-users of herbicide reductants. In the mean test results, only the mean of planting area per a tree and the maximum selling price of coffee beans are the same between the two categories of respondents. While the results of the variance test, only one variable results H0 rejection, namely the average price. The variance of average price in reductant users is more stable than the variance in non-reductant users. The chi squares test showed that there was a relationship between the respondent's category and every categories variable, that is education, land condition, frequency of herbicide use, frequency of use of organic fertilizers, respondent's perception of the impact of chemical herbicides without reductants, and the length of the harvest period. (Approx. 232 words)

Dear SICBAS 2021 Committee

Dear SICBAS 2021 Committee,

Before, We thank you for providing us with information to revise our paper.

The paper that we revised was only

[ABS-41 REVISED_PAPER] Hypothesis Testing in The Study of The Characteristics of Pagaram Coffee Farmers as Herbicide Reductant Users
*Irmeilyana (a*), Ngudiantoro (a), Sri Indra Maiyanti (a)*

We have actually uploaded a revised paper on the SICBAS system according to the AIP Proceeding format on November 9, 2021 ago.

Earlier we had uploaded the latest revision to the system in our account. But the paper file is in docx form.

Here we also attach the file in two versions, namely docx and pdf.

Thank you.

Best regards,

Irmeilyana and team
